

ICC Alumni tell their story...

"There is an element of team and working together, and there was practice. And if you look at choir it encompassed all of those. And to have that stick-to-it-tive-ness and to have those parents that said yes you can do it - because they saw the future. I mean they saw what the choir could do, and could be for me. It was great. I just still can't believe that I had such great experiences."
- Turae Dabney, Executive Director
Indianapolis Black Chamber of Commerce

"ICC really, really gives you the discipline and the pride in what you are doing and gives you a sense of how important what you are doing is to other people and to the community. So, it was very exciting going and performing in a concert and seeing the outcome of all your hard work and what it meant to people."
- Ella Mouria Seet, Professional Singer and Actor

"Programs such as the ICC give children that opportunity not just to be successful as a musician or as a singer, but in life as a whole because if you have the opportunities to get in front of people, the opportunity to perform, the opportunity to shake those jitters and give yourself the confidence, that gives you the same confidence you can go into an interview and get a job in a different field."
- Rosevelt Colvin: 2x Super Bowl Champion

"I think that all of the hard work and effort really just shapes everybody in some way. I have learned hard work, I learned a good work ethic, determination. I'm quite stubborn and I don't want to give up on things. And so the fact that I got in ICC and I just kept on my path and just kept on doing it. I just think that that's a great lesson."
- Molly Lintz, National Sales Manager, UT Austin
